2022

About us

Here at Old Modern Handicrafts, every ship has a story. From bow to stern, starboard to port side, every vessel carries its own exquisite history. Through our fine craftsmanship, we tell that story the way it deserves to be told – with heart and soul.

Old Modern Handicrafts uses traditional methods of building ship models, while integrating modern innovations. Our master craftsmen in Vietnam construct each ship entirely by hand using the traditional plank-on-bulkhead method. They then harness high-tech tools like laser machines to create fine, accurate details. Each ship is scaled down in precise proportions from the original model for authenticity. It is a masterful synthesis of modern and traditional methods that makes the Old Modern quality one of a kind.

What we mean by quality you can trust:

- Extensive research through original plans and pictures makes our models true to life.
- 100% hand-built from scratch, plank by plank.
- Hundreds of hours of work go into our museum-quality models.
- Made of quality wood such as western red cedar, mahogany, rosewood, teak, and more
- Chrome, brass, and cast metal fittings and ornaments add richness and verisimilitude
- Each model must pass a demanding quality control process before leaving the workshop and making its voyage to you.

Old Modern Handicrafts carries all manner of ships from every age of sail, and we are also proud to build custom models for our customers. Drop us a line – it's our pleasure to help you tell your story.

Staying at shore? Explore our nautical offerings for the home. Our novelties include vintage-style globes, magnifiers and telescopes, clocks, furniture, and all manner of nautical décor. The same quality of craftsmanship and care is extended to all our products, on land or at sea.

How the Story Began

A small village in Vietnam

Dong Nai

San Francisco gift fair

the voyage begins

The story of Old Modern Handicrafts begins in a small Vietnamese village by a river. It was a village of master woodworkers, and the home of founder Francisco Vuong. Growing up on a boathouse, Francisco had worked with his hands to make fine crafts ever since he was a child. In 1999, he met a man from New York in quest of unique gifts while in Vietnam. From that relationship, bridging differences in language, culture, and nationality, Old Modern Handicrafts was born.

all hands on deck

In 2001, Old Modern Handicrafts opened its first factory in Đồng Nai, a stone's throw from Saigon. Francisco brought workers from his native village to the cosmopolitan city, helping many families find work at a time of national struggle. Francisco also built a small library in the factory, empowering workers with limited education to broaden their horizons.

swimming ashore

That same year, Francisco's son, Eric, was a student at the City College of San Francisco. Striving to stay afloat in a new country, he asked his parents for help – but instead of funds, his parents sent ships! This was the start of the U.S. branch of Old Modern Handicrafts. At the San Francisco gift fair, Eric got his first $10,000 order – serious money for a college kid!

testing the waters

Still finding his sea legs, Eric went to road shows and local fairs to try to sell products. It wasn't always smooth sailing – at his first show in Pasadena, he arrived late and sold only one small airplane. But it was there that a customer told him to try his luck at the Queen Mary. And at the Queen Mary, another friendly soul suggested the Los Angeles gift fair. There Eric and now wife Daisy talked so much, they'd lost their voices by the time they finally got to go home.

making waves

Now Old Modern Handicrafts USA was in business. Eric travelled from San Francisco to Vegas, Atlanta, North Carolina, and all around Stateside, netting profits and meeting the big fish. He also started the Wooden Boat USA brand, expanding into real size boats. Old Modern kayaks and canoes hit the water, with one of Eric's first big orders coming from a customer in Brazil.

weathering the storm

The 2008 Great Recession hit businesses hard, but Old Modern Handicrafts sailed steadily through the storm. Providence came in the form of a lifeline from the New York Times. The famous newspaper was the first to break the news of the Titanic sinking and reached out to inquire about models of the ship. It was the beginning of a beautiful friendship, as OMH became a bestseller with the NYT for a decade.

winds of change

But the boat didn't stop rocking. With the onset of the 2010s, a sea change swept the world. As brick-and-mortar stores went down like sinking ships in the Digital Age, Old Modern Handicrafts segued into online retail. Changes also took place on the workshop floor. In 2012, the company started using laser, computer-controlled, and 3D machines. Handcraftsmanship remained the order of the day, but now it was bolstered by exciting new technologies.

stranger tides

2021 and another great wave hits in the form of the COVID-19 pandemic. All kinds of costs, from lumber to freight, rise exponentially – but OMH doesn't sink. In Đổng Nai, the factory keeps up the good work with safety restrictions in place and followed to the letter. In California, the team continues to set its sights high. A new collection named for Eric's daughter, Anne Home, provides a fresh haul of nautical décor. The operation remains shipshape and more than seaworthy.

More adventures are on the horizon!

Steps to Build Our Ship Models

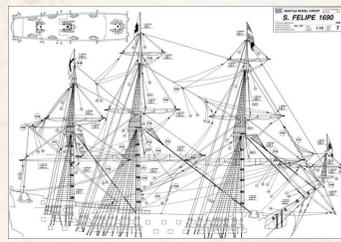

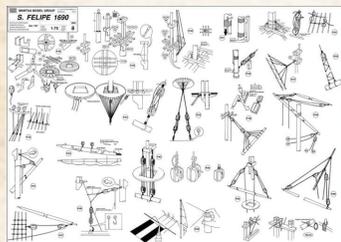

Step 1: Prepare materials. Fine lumbers are seasoned and kiln dried to the appropriate humidity level before they are used.

Great products are made from great materials. We acquired the best materials from around the globe including clear grade western red cedar from Canada, exotic woods from south America and Asia, U.S. made Gorilla glue, US Hexcel fiber glass, and other top of the line materials.

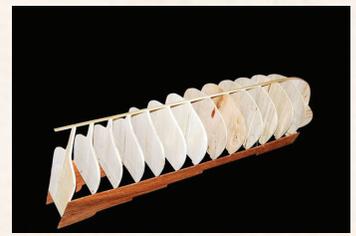

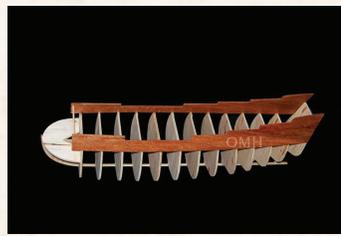

Products made of western red cedar are not only beautiful but also free of cracking or warping.

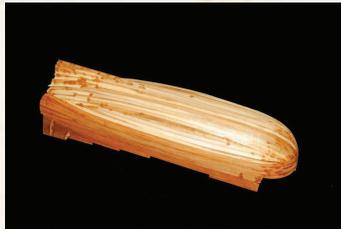

Step 2: Research. Extensive research through original plans and pictures are completed so that we have all correct information to build an authentic model.

Step 3: Start building. Build the keel, bulkheads and gunwales. This step is very important to get the model into ship shape.

Step 4: Plank. Planks are cut and bent to the shape of the hull. Each plank is then glued to the bulkhead carefully.

Step 5: Plank some more. A second layer of planking is done. In this particular ship, the second layer consists of many small pieces of wood to form an inlay hull. Planking is a time-consuming process but makes our models much more attractive.

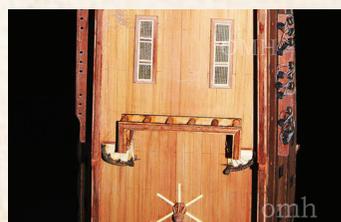

Step 6: Glue. Glue and epoxy are poured evenly into the inside of the hull. Top quality, wood glue is used adequately for planking and to make sure the hull will not split due to humidity changes.

Step 7: Sand. The hull is sanded repeatedly so that the surface is as smooth and shiny as fine furniture.

Step 8: Install the deck. Notice that the deck is laser cut to imitate the actual deck of the original ship.

Step 9: Build stern details. The ship stern section includes admiral cabin, chart house and other details.

Step 10: Build bow details. The ship bow section includes the bow sprit, bow sprit yard, beak-head, and other details.

Step 11: Drill. Gun ports are drilled along the sides of the ship.

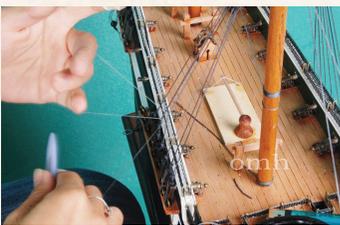

Step 12: Paint. The hull is painted with several coats of clear or solid color. Please examine the model to see that our paint job is done very carefully.

Step 13: Build masts. Masts, including the main mast, foremast and mizzen mast are built. The yard arms and crow's nests are also added at this step.

Step 14: Rigging. This is a very tedious process that takes our craftsmen many hours to complete.

Step 15: Build railings.

Step 16: Build deck details. Other deck details are added: Lanterns, boat davits, ship's wheel, life boats, deck rooms, belfry, staircase, skylight...

Step 17: Add the sails. The sails are all hand stitched with fine details. They are also seasoned to make the sails look and feel like real.

Step 18: Finishing touches. Finish up with brass sculptures and decorative ornaments. Our brass ornaments are all casted from metal by hand by our skillful craftsmen.

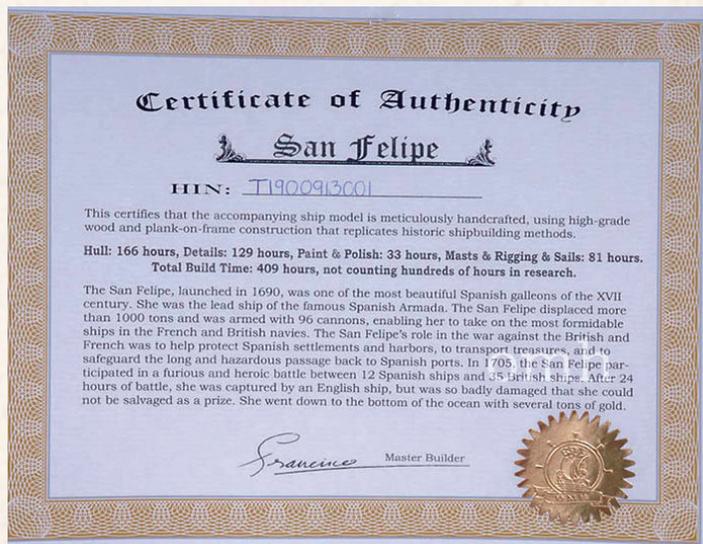

Step 19: Quality control. A final quality control process is conducted to make sure our models are historically accurate, detailed, well-built, and attractive. Each OMH model is uniquely identified by a serial number.

Step 20: Packaging. In this final important step, the ship is packed in a sturdy wood crate and then put in a nice carton box with cushion for maximum protection. We also perform a drop test to make sure the package is safe in shipping.

OMH ship models come with a certificate of authenticity signed by our master builder.
